Tenure Track Assistant Professor
Modern and Contemporary Art History and Theory

The Department of Visualization and the Department of Architecture at Texas A&M University in College Station, Texas invite applications for a joint tenure-track faculty position at the Assistant Professor level with specialization in Modern and/or Contemporary Art History and Theory.

The mission of the Department of Visualization is to advance the art, science and technology of visualization. Programs include the B.S., M.S. and M.F.A in Visualization. The Visualization faculty engage in and support innovation in teaching, research, and creative works across a wide range of areas where computing can be used to create visual experiences. Further information is available at http://viz.arch.tamu.edu.

The mission of the Department of Architecture is to educate students while creating and disseminating new knowledge in the theory and practice of architectural design. We impact society by designing environments that foster economic, social, and ecological responsibility. Programs include the Bachelor of Environmental Design and the M.S., M.Arch, and Ph.D. in Architecture. Further information is available at http://dept.arch.tamu.edu.

Responsibilities: Expectations for this position include teaching core and advanced courses at the undergraduate and graduate levels within the two departments, developing new courses in an area of specialization, mentoring students and serving on student advisory committees, and participating in academic governance and university service. The successful candidate is expected to pursue a strong research agenda related to modern and/or contemporary art history, theory and practice.

Responsibilities will include teaching core courses that serve undergraduate majors, the Minor in Art, the Minor in Art and Architectural History, and the university core curriculum. These courses are typically taught as large lecture classes and also on-line. Participation in the continuing development of these courses, including on-line delivery, is a part of this responsibility. Responsibilities will also include teaching courses in Contemporary Art History and Theory at the graduate level.

Qualifications: Minimum qualifications include a Ph.D., or equivalent, in an area directly related to Modern and/or Contemporary Art History and Theory. A proven record of successful teaching and scholarship is required. Excellent oral, written, and visual communication skills, as well as experience mentoring students and graduate student supervision are highly desirable.

Areas of specialization that contribute to the missions of the two departments are desirable. Scholars interested in collaborating with artists and visualization practitioners are especially welcome to apply. Documented collaboration on interdisciplinary research teams will be considered an asset.
Please apply online with a letter of application, CV, teaching and research statements and contact information for three references. Application materials should be emailed to vizfacultysearch@arch.tamu.edu. Review of applications will begin October 15th and will continue until the position is filled.

The Texas A&M University system will provide equal opportunity to all applicants for employment, regardless of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability, age, or veteran status.
